INDO-CHINA NEXT?

Russia and China would undoubtedly like to keep U. S. forces bogged down in Korea. This is a rule that works both ways. Korea is important as a symbol, but Indo-China is crucial. The more Chinese MacArthur keeps bogged down in Korea the better.

A Chinese "liberation" of French Indo-China would make it difficult, if not impossible, to keep all Southeast Asia from falling into communist hands. The fall of Indo-China would gravely menace the security of Indonesia, Siam, Malaya and the Philippines.

Indo-China is almost certainly next on Peiping's list. A few weeks ago Red China announced that Chinese in Indo-China were asking Peiping's help against French "persecution." General Wu insolently proclaimed in the UN China's intention to "liberate" Indo-China soon. And only a few days ago China denounced the alleged violation of Chinese territory by French guns and planes from Indo-China.

These charges are ominously like those that preceded Chinese intervention in Korea. These were preceded by the training of Ho Chi-minh's battalions on Chinese soil, and by a heavy increase in material supplied to Ho from China. Peiping has 200,000 Chinese troops poised in South China, 100 miles east of Indo-China. Ho's forces have Chinese artillerymen and technicians. A Russian military mission is reported at Nanning to supervise military operations of these forces.

France, with 150,000 of her best troops in Indo-China, has been clinging to a precarious hold, and incoming American supplies will not be sufficient to meet the Chinese threat.

PLANES FOR FARMERS

The airplane has come into general use by farmers and ranchers with large operations. Its acceptance as a piece of equipment is increasing steadily and it will eventually have a role as important as that of the tractor.

At the Texas Agricultural College the first plane designed and built especially for farmers has just been put in the air. Representing a year's work by college personnel, aided by representatives of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, the plane met all preliminary tests.

The craft has extra thick wings for carrying heavy loads of spray or dust for crops, a high open cockpit giving the pilot a wider range of visibility, and wide tread landing gear, with large tires, for landing in open fields.

Nothing has been more amazing in these modern times than the development of the airplane, and the many uses to which it has been found adaptable. In peace or war the airplane has become a vital necessity. That it should play a role in the field of agriculture, where it will serve as usefully as it has in many other endeavors, is a natural development.

Switzerland is the model nation. It wants nothing from anybody. What a world this would be if they were all like that.

Busy Thoroughfare Is a Poor Playground for Child

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

A GOOD many little children are badly maimed or have their precious lives crushed out in the street, and sometimes while the helpless, frantic father or mother is looking on.

Such accidents are not limited to the crowded areas of a city, but often occur in the roomy sections of suburbs or in the highways running by spacious country homes. In front of homes where adults often pass on the sidewalk, or cars and trucks constantly move by, young children don't often venture. Frequently the most dangerous place for a tot is on an unfenced lawn by a street on which a car or truck passes only occasionally, unless this toddler has been trained early and effectively never to go beyond definite boundaries and never to step into the street unprotected. Paradoxically, the child with most space in which to play often is the very one to whom the street is most perilous.

Undue Faith

The parents of this child tend to put undue faith in this youngster's safety and thus neglect to train secure attitudes and habits in him.

Also some parents will put up fences for the tot's protection and these fences can help keep this little tot in safe play space where he will require less constant watching. But always there are some older persons who will leave gates open. Now the tot who has not learned to stop at designated borders, whether it be an open gate, the curb or some other designated limit, may often face great hazards. Safer than any real fence is a fence invisible.

established in the youngster's nervous system.

Crippled or Killed

Most little children who, before they begin school, are crippled or killed, could easily have been kept whole and alive if when they began to play outdoors they were trained effectively not to go unprotected beyond certain clearly designated boundaries. It can be done but it will require time and a program carried through to the letter by a parent who is consistent and self-disciplined.

Now the little child who runs unrestrainedly into the street is pretty sure to get pain, to be knocked senseless, even killed, which are natural consequences. But why trust to nature? Why not improve on nature and provide pain which can do him no harm but can train him to escape nature's penalties?

Therefore, always be right with the toddler when he is playing near the street or similar hazards, until you are sure he will avoid these perils. Make clear to him he must not step in the street or go beyond a tree, stone or crack in the walk. Be so near him that always and instantly when he crosses the designated boundary he will get pain, such as from smacking by your bare hand on his thighs, bare if possible. Be sure he has playthings he can safely turn to then for pleasure. Continue with this program day after day until you are sure he will keep himself inside these boundaries. Even thereafter don't relax your vigilance. More details are given in my bulletin, "How To Teach Tot Meaning of No" (to be had by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of this paper). More on this tomorrow.

Lutheran Guild Hears Sister Evelyn Houlroyd

The annual Christmas meeting of the Lutheran Guild was held Monday at 8 p. m. in the Lutheran Parish House with Mrs. Herman Horn, president, presiding. After the singing of the carol, "O Come All Ye Faithful" devotions were conducted by Rev. Paul H. Gleichman, which included Luke 2:4-12 (scripture reading) Christmas excerpt "The Maid-Servant At The Inn," followed by prayers for the advent season.

A contralto solo was rendered by Miss Carol Wisler who sang "White Christmas." She was accompanied by Miss Lois Bolton, who also played for the carol singing.

Rev. Gleichman then introduced the speaker of the evening, Sister Evelyn Houlroyd, Philadelphia, field secretary of The Lutheran board of Deaconess work. In a most interesting manner, Sister Evelyn gave a short history of the deaconate from its beginning in Germany more than 100 years ago and until the present time. Requirements and specialized branches of the deaconate were also related. A set of 50 colored slides depicting the scenes of Christmas at The Mary J. Drexel Home and Lutheran hospital were shown with an explanation of each. These slides were the most recent produced by these institutions.

An offering of $5 was given to the Board of Deaconess work for their visual aid fund and $5 to the Lutheran Social Mission society, Philadelphia. Following the singing of "Silent Night" and benediction by the pastor, a social period followed. The committee in charge of decorations consisted of Mrs. Fred McKinney, Mrs. Herman Horn and Mrs. Harold Rittler.

He urged the property owners and taxpayers interested in zoning to be on the alert and guard for pressure groups and untrue distortions and opposition.

Calling North Pole

1-9-5-0 By RAY A. LA JOIE

JINGLE BELL FIVE

ES, Santa Claus was sound asleep.

When 50 years before he had gone off to sleep in just such a temper, every means that you can think of were used to wake him up, but without success.

Bells were rung, and drums were beaten, and horns were sounded, and trumpets blown, without doing one particle of good. But what neither bells, nor drums, nor horns, nor trumpets could do, the little telephone up in the corner did. Because, you see, behind it were the little children.

Oh! That phone just tingled all over with fun as it kept up a constant Ting-a-ling! Brr-r-r-r-r! Ting-a-ling! It knew Santa couldn't stand that. And sure enough, it woke him up in the middle of the afternoon.

Santa looked at the clock, which stood at the foot of his bed. It was a wonderful timepiece. It not only told the hour of the day, but the day of the week, and the month.

He rubbed his eyes and looked again. There stood the record—Sunday, December 24, Four O'clock.

So he had slept only four hours! He turned over in bed and covered himself up and tried to go to sleep again, but it was useless. The phone hadn't the slightest idea of allowing that sleep to go on. It rang incessantly.

Santa couldn't sleep, so he rolled out of bed and looked for his boots.

He put on a short coat over his long dressing gown and a pair of slippers and went out into the pine-scented dining room. As soon as he opened the door the phone stopped ringing. He called for his wife. He called for Dando. No answer.

Santa rushed out to the barn. Sleigh, reindeer and presents—all gone! No sign of Christmas anywhere. It all came over him as he went back to the house. The hundreds of thousands of disappointed children that soon would awaken Christmas morning! He quickly reached for the telephone and buzzed furiously for the operator.

"Hello! I'm Santa Claus. Connect me with everybody. At once! Please rush. This instant! Immediately!"

Brrrr-r-r-r-r-r-r! In every house and store and office, except in the poor section and other such places, sounded the call, and fathers and mothers, and sisters and brothers, and uncles and aunts, as well as the children, heard the message.

"Dear little children!" he said. "My wife has run off with my sleigh. And Dando, too! Taken all your presents with her."

"Mrs. Claus doesn't know whom the presents belong to. She will give them to all the beggars and sick children all over the world. She has always said she would do it if she ever got the chance!"

"Dear children, won't you send me word that you will be willing to go without your Christmas gifts this year? It shall never happen again. I promise!"

Santa shouted so loud that not only the fathers, mothers, uncles and aunts heard this unusual announcement, but it reached the ears of the newboys and shoeboys and errand boys and street sweepers and one impudent little rascal threw up his cap and yelled, "Three cheers for Mrs. Claus!" and such a "Hurray" you never heard before and never will again.

HELP THE KIDDIES SELECT CLOTHING THAT IS BECOMING

By Frances Vannoy
(Home Economics Extension Representative)

Every member of the family can encourage a child to begin making good selections in clothing.

Adults and other family members have a great influence with a younger child. This influence can contribute to good training or, if ignored, may deprive the child of experiences which he may never have the opportunity to learn later on.

A child learns by trial and error, as well as by imitating people he admires. He is not only influenced by other members of his family but also by movies and comics. A good example of this is the current craze among children for cowboy costumes.

A young child is encouraged by praise. Praise his good selections of clothing and explain what would be better when he makes a poor choice.

Father's influence is important. He can do much to encourage neatness and a pride in good appearance.

ance by commenting when a child looks well-groomed. His example is a strong one, too, so it is important that he always look well-dressed. A mother sets good standards of appearance by being well-groomed every day, as well as when she is dressed for a special occasion.

Clothing has a great deal to do with the kind of character traits a child develops. For instance, self-consciousness, a stage that many children pass through, may be over-developed by clothes that fit poorly, are unbecoming, or are not appropriate. Attractive and suitable clothes may help a child through this period quickly, or help him to avoid it altogether.

Unsuitable clothing also can increase timidity and bashfulness. Most children are interested in color and are usually attracted first to bright hues. Girls are often more sensitive to colors than boys. It is well to remember that girls usually dress themselves sooner than boys do, and that most children want to dress as their companions do.

Hospitals were paid $1,196,452.24 by Blue Cross in October for the care of 18,933 subscriber-patients. It was announced today by Thomas S. Gates, Jr., president of the Board of Directors of the Associated Hospital Service of Philadelphia.

Member hospitals treated 16,097 cases and received for their services $1,081,459.33. A total of $114,952.91 was paid to non-member hospitals for the treatment of 1936 cases.

"The October payment to hospitals raised the total amount paid out to the hospitals by Blue Cross since 1938 to $63,931,167.28."

"For the first ten months of 1950 Blue Cross has paid the hospitals $12,163,949.20 or an average of more than $1,200,000 every month," Gates said.

ly returned from Korea, a brand new television set. The hospital now has 18 TV sets but 30 more are needed to take care of the 1,092 wounded veterans from the Korean area now at the hospital. And more wounded men are arriving daily.

The presentation by the Bucks county veterans was made by Joseph A. Woll, Al Fries, George Fitzgerald and Commander Warren Watson, of the Doylestown Post, VFW.

"Any organization interested in purchasing a television set for the wounded veterans at Valley Forge, will be doing an outstanding good deed," Commander Watson said today. "You have to see the faces of those fellows when a gift like this is presented, to realize what it means."

Four hundred men and women attended the annual Christmas party for members of the Loyal Republican club of Bucks County held at the headquarters in Buckingham, Monday evening.

Last Saturday afternoon the annual Christmas party for kiddies with 500 youngsters present, was held at the Buckingham Grange Hall, when every youngster was welcomed by Santa Claus and given candy gifts and well provided with refreshments including 1500 hot dogs.

The entertainment for the youngsters was provided by Pedro, The Clown; Captain Shaw and Bobby, the "wonder monkey," who recently appeared on Ed Sullivan's TV show; Had Smith and Bane, a novelty team.

Last night's party for the adults also included a visit from Santa Claus, and a ban on speech-making, other than appreciation expressed by State Senator Edward B. Watson to his many friends for what they did at the recent election that made it possible for him to return to Harrisburg for another term.

One of the best shows ever presented at the club house was in charge of Harry Ritter. Christmas gifts were presented to Mrs. Mary Dunn, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary and to Harris Holmes, president of the club.

The entertainment numbers included Yvonne and Harmon, harmony singing team; Alberts and Leona, a double musical act with magic; Betty Emerich, comedy star; Whittaker Brothers, comedy and impersonation act.

Last night's party ended the program of activities of the club until next Spring.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

FOOD is the housewife's first interest. Yes, it's true that there are many other important tasks around the home. But the problem of feeding that busy family three "squares" a day goes to the top of the list. Turning out well-balanced, appetizing meals day in and day out is no easy job. First comes the decision regarding what to cook then comes the shopping, the preparation and, finally, the serving.

Perhaps a little help will be welcome. This week A & P's Service for Homemakers suggests a hearty English Beef Pie for Sunday Dinner.

To prepare, cut two pounds of round steak into one-inch cubes; dredge with three tablespoons flour. Melt three tablespoons fat in a heavy skillet or Dutch oven. Add meat and brown evenly over moderate heat. Add two sliced onions and cook until soft but not browned.

Then add two cups of boiling water, cover and simmer gently for half an hour or until steak is almost tender. Add two teaspoons salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, two cups stewed or canned tomatoes, one cup of sliced carrots, three cups sliced potatoes. Cover and cook half hour or until vegetables are tender.

Remove meat and vegetables to a greased casserole of about two quarts capacity. Thicken stock with flour and water mixed to a smooth paste, allowing one tablespoon flour for each cup of stock. Pour gravy over meat and vegetables; cover with pastry or biscuit topping. Bake in a hot oven twenty to twenty-five minutes or until topping is browned. There will be ample here for six servings.

For a dessert that will satisfy the family's sweet tooth, serve banana chiffon pie with a cup of cleansing coffee.

Definitely Devastating!

Court Decision in Bridge Deal Will Cause Loss

ood faith and exercised their own good faith, independent business judgment," Norcross said.

"The bridges were purchased only after the commissioners thoroughly studied reports made by such nationally-known experts as Coverdale & Colpitts, traffic engineers; Madjeski & Masters, consulting engineers; American Appraisal Co., specialists in evaluations; Haskins and Sells, accountants; and Wood, King & Dawson, municipal bond attorneys."

Most of these same firms, Norcross added, today are employed by the State and its agencies, including the New Jersey Turnpike Authority and the Delaware River Port Commission.

"Their reports, which we relied upon, established the soundness of the investment and pointed out that the county would earn a profit of $135,380 from the spans," Norcross said.

"At no time during the trial, or since, have these reports been shown to be false. In fact, they have been shown to be ultra-conservative, as it is now estimated the county's profit would be $13,000,000."

The motives of county ownership, Norcross said, were "to acquire the bridges without cost or obligation to the county and its taxpayers, to earn a profit for the county, and to reduce tolls as rapidly as possible."

"These motives were achieved," he said. "We obtained the bridges without investing a single penny of the county's money. The credit of the county was not obligated in any way. During two years of operation, more than one half a million dollars has been accumulated as county profit. And the traveling public already has saved more than $600,000 due to reduction of tolls."

When the commission assumed operation of the spans, Norcross explained, it reduced tolls from 5 and 30 cents to 25 cents.

In addition, Norcross said, the commission voluntarily has paid the communities of Palmyra and Burlington approximately $35,500 annually in lieu of taxes.

Croydon Firemen Name Officers; Hear Reports

CROYDON, Dec. 14—During the regular monthly meeting of Croydon Fire Co., held Tuesday evening at the fire house, a standing vote of thanks was given by the entire group of men present to Otto Jester, who is retiring as a trustee at the end of the current year. Mr. Jester has been a trustee and very active for a number of years. During this meeting the following were re-elected for 1951: President, Francis Fishburn; financial secretary, George Gleason; recording secretary, Ralston Hedrick, Sr.; treasurer, William Johnston, Sr. Also re-elected was Chief William Smith, Sr., and Raymond Hopkins, assistant chief, as were Harry Faulks, Jr., and William Johnston, Jr., as captains.

Howard Polk was elected as a trustee to serve for three years, and Arnold Schoenbacher was elected vice-president.

Chief William Smith, Sr., commended the men on their untiring efforts during the hurricane. He stated 30 calls were answered by the men, for removing fallen trees, dumping out cellars and removing people stranded by the flood waters. He stated crews were stationed in the fire house continuously for 2 hours, during the height of the trouble. Drivers are requested to be present Sunday afternoon to go over the operation of the apparatus which was recently obtained.

President Fishburn stated the executive committee met and the entire membership were checked and classified as active or associate members as required by the by-laws of the company.

George Gleason, financial secretary, stated all members will be notified of their classification within the next 30 days.

The building committee reported the contractor is on schedule and the new building is going up in due style.

After the meeting was adjourned, refreshments were served to all.

Thankoffering Festival Marks Closing Service

The closing exercises of the "Children of the Church" of Zion Lutheran church was held on Saturday at 9:30. The Rev. Paul H. Gleichman presided at the service. Following the singing of "Praise Him, Praise Him" the 23rd Psalm and Apostles Creed were repeated in unison. The beginners department rendered the carol, "A Great and Mighty Wonder" and a Christmas prayer. "Silent Night" was sung by the Junior department. A Thankoffering Festival also took place at this time, each child presenting his Thankoffering box. An explanation of the use of this money was given by pastor Gleichman, who told of how the money would be used in the Lutheran churches at home and abroad. The primary department then gave a closing prayer, followed by the Lord's prayer.

A departmental exhibit was held in the Parish house displaying the work of various departments.

This program designed primarily for children of the Lutheran church is conducted each Saturday morning from 9:30-11:30 and is divided into periods of two and one half months for each unit. The course includes religious instruction, handicrafts, recreation, mission study of home and foreign fields, the life of Martin Luther, chapel periods and a study of foreign fields by audio-visual methods.

The faculty consisted of: Primary—Mrs. Fred McKinney and Mrs. Harold Furness; Beginners—Mrs. Herman Horn and Mrs. Walter Schrenk, Juniors—Mrs. Raymond Schneider, Miss Katherine Beck, Mrs. Paul Gleichman, Assistants were Misses Grace Ann and Jean Veigel, Registrar—Mrs. Melvin Daniels, Director of the school—Mrs. Paul Gleichman. Approximately 54 pupils were enrolled. As a special project the children, assisted by members of the Sunday School and church collected woolen clothes for the Lutheran children in Japan and religious and educational supplies for children in Lutheran areas of the southern mountains of the United States.

BASKETS ARE VERY HANDY ITEMS TO HAVE ABOUT HOUSE

By Frances Vannoy
(Home Economics Extension Representative)

Baskets have all kinds of uses for household tasks. They are attractive, easy to empty and clean, well ventilated, and light. There is a use for every basket, no matter what its size and shape.

A child likes a basket to carry his playthings in because he can easily grasp the basket handle.

Baskets make an attractive holder for magazines or for an arrangement of fruits or flowers. They're handy, too, when you gather the last garden flowers.

Try a sturdy basket to hold logs for the fireplace. Use baskets for waste paper. They are more attractive than tin and will last longer than cardboard.

Your grandmother probably used a basket to hold her sewing supplies. Now you can buy baskets for the same purpose—deluxe models that have a separate compartment for every sewing need. They also come in special sizes and shapes for crocheting and knitting.

Baskets for bread or rolls, or long ones for crackers, are becoming increasingly popular at the dinner table.

At housecleaning time, a flat-bottomed basket to carry cleaning supplies is ideal and it will save you many steps.

One of the most common uses for baskets, of course, is to hold the groceries on marketing day. A pretty basket for baby's bath equipment makes a nice gift.

GENERATING UNIT FOR SELL-PERK SCHOOL

It Is To Be Installed In High School and To Be Automatic

APPROVE ACTIVITIES

SELLERSVILLE, Dec. 14—Sellersville - Perkasee School Board has ordered an emergency electric generating unit which will be installed in the high school. The unit will be automatic in its operation and will provide current when the regular supply fails.

Until Perkasee borough discontinued the generation of current in its municipal plant several years ago the high school had a hook-up with the P. P. & L. system through Sellersville and with the Perkasee system. However, since Perkasee now purchases its current from the same source that supplies Sellersville, there was no stand-by service at the high school.

Harold Milliken, Walnut street, Sellersville, was elected a janitor-bus driver. He will succeed Russell Cressman, who recently resigned. The resignation becomes effective Dec. 21.

The Board approved a long list of activities scheduled to take place in the schools during the holiday season.

Among these are:

Dec. 14, Dramatic program in Third Street building, Perkasee, by the Junior High School.

Dec. 16, Concert by North Penn A Capella choir in high school.

Dec. 20, Annual Christmas program by the music department of Sell-Perk High.

Dec. 21, U. S. Gauge Christmas party in the high school.

Dec. 23, Chamber of Commerce Christmas party for children in the Third Street School, Perkasee.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Double-Faced

Washington, Dec. 14. What is happening abroad to our military forces and in New York to our diplomatic forces (to say nothing of the Attlee-Truman conferences here) is so much more dramatic and colorful than naturally they obscure what is happening to our economic situation at home. But they are not really more important.

For our military and diplomatic power wholly depend upon our economic strength and solidity. That is basic. Without economic strength there can be neither military strength nor diplomatic force. There are several other facts accepted by reasonable men. One is that inflation is perhaps the chief national peril. Uncontrolled, it can be as devastating as a lost war. Uncontrolled, it can lose a war. Another is that the chief causes of inflation are the high prices created by vast Government expenditures. Another is that the only way to keep prices from running away is to control wages, profits, food costs and all other costs of production.

Inflation cannot be successfully combatted by doing one of these things. They all have to be done. And they should be done at the beginning of the defense program, not in the middle and certainly not after wages and prices have begun really to soar. In brief, delay is not only costly but too long a delay can be ruinous. There has never been a denial of Mr. B. M. Baruch's oft-repeated assertion that failure to face the facts in the last war resulted in its prolongation by six months at an additional cost of a hundred billion dollars and many wholly unnecessary casualties. Last summer these realities were so generally accepted that before Congress adjourned it not only gave Mr. Truman everything he asked with which to fight inflation but some things, including the vital power to regulate wages, for which he had not asked at all.

Since then the Administration has played a double-faced game—ineffectually attempting to restrain inflation by credit controls while directly encouraging inflation by aiding wage boosts. In consequence, wages have gone on a rampage. Strike after strike has been called. Raise after raise has been granted. Time after time the Government's weight has been on the labor side and time after time industry has raised prices to meet the wage boost, which is thus passed on to the consumer, thereby directly promoting inflation. The result is that by the end of October prices had reached their highest peak and the cost of living had broken all records. Estimates are that $9,000,000,000 has thus been added to the cost of our defense program for which $48,000,000,000 has now been appropriated and asked.

Why has Mr. Truman with full knowledge and warning failed to exercise the power voted him to control the inflation against which he so earnestly preaches? Why has he let nine billion be added to the cost of his program? Why, against all reason and experience, has he permitted himself to be persuaded that labor and industry will voluntarily keep down wages and profits? Why, with the costly lessons of War I and War II clearly before him, has he not acted? It is true he has appointed a long string of mobilizers and stabilizers, including a wage stabilizer. But, up to date, they have not mobilized or stabilized anything at all.

Nor, judging from the way the new wage stabilizer talks, are they likely to stabilize anything for quite a while. Apparently he is not even sure wage control is necessary. It is fair to say that in this uncertainty he reflects the Administration attitude, which in the field of economics is anything but certain about anything. What are the reasons for this extremely costly uncertainty? Those with the best foundations are, first, that Mr. Truman and his political advisers are still in such fear of the professional labor bosses with whom they are politically linked that they dare not take a step to which they are opposed.

The second reason is the fancy arguments of Mr. Leon Keyserling, chief of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. Though Mr. Keyserling's views of the current inflation problem are held by exceedingly few recognized economists and directly clash with those of Mr. Baruch and practically every other man of experience, he seems not only to have impressed Mr. Truman but to have swept all the mobilizers and stabilizers off their feet. Though their instinct is against the Keyserling philosophy, they do not know enough or cannot talk fast enough to argue with him. Hence, in this great national crisis we find ourselves being economically directed by a man who thinks the size of the debt is unimportant, that inflation can be controlled without wage and price control, that nondefense expenditures should go up and not down. Perhaps one reason the Keyserling views prevail with Mr. Truman and his mobilizers and stabilizers is because his way of handling the problem is so much easier for them than the drastic steps urged by others.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"By FULTON LEWIS, JR.
(Copyright, 1950
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 — Communist attacks in Korea are directed from a major Soviet military base 700 air miles from the Manchurian border. U. S. intelligence agents have reported to Washington.

The Soviet city of Chita is the staging area for 2,000 Russian aircraft that supply a string of Soviet-controlled coastal airfields from the Yellow Sea to the Bering Sea. Jet fighters operating in Korea come from the airfields surrounding Chita.

In addition to the aircraft, Russia maintains 15 ground troop divisions in Chita, a city of 50,000 population. A Russian marshal named Malinovsky was in charge the last time U. S. intelligence sources got word out of the area. Chita would be one of the prime U. S. atom bomb targets, if the Russians decide to continue playing rough.

To keep an eye on the Philippine Islands, the Russians are building up an air-ground military base at Nanchang in China. This is the southern anchor of the network of Russian bases which would be utilized in any drive to clean us out of the Pacific.

The northern anchor of Soviet installations is at Magadan, a short hop from the northern tip of Sakhalin island, the lush oil producing area handed over to the Soviet Union when Alger Hiss and his buddies decided the Russians needed coaxing to enter the fight against Japan.

Magadan has a big network of airfields, well stocked with Soviet versions of the B-29 and paratroop aircraft of the C-47 variety.

Magadan is also high on the priority list for atomic bombing and one of the encouraging things about this is that a large number of U. S. airmen know exactly how to get there. During the war when we were ferrying aircraft to the Soviet Union as fast as they could be manufactured, Magadan was one of the stopping places. At first, when the route from Fairbanks, Alaska, was being worked out, U. S. airmen were allowed inside Russia. Some got as far as Chita, also, and on several occasions various missions to Moscow were flown that way by U. S. crews handling diplomats or lend-lease officials.

As soon as the route was set up, Soviet air crews moved into Fairbanks, where they took over from U. S. bomber crews. From that point on no Americans were allowed to cross the Soviet border. But those who did get across the border earlier got a good look, and have the route well mapped. They also noted how the Soviet planners were building up the bases at Magadan and Chita, putting in roads and communications far beyond what was needed for the wartime ferrying operation. Even then the Russians had in mind future operations which we are just beginning to feel now.

Even closer to home are the Soviet bases on the Kamchatka Peninsula, which include the Komandorskie islands. These are within shouting distance of the Aleutian Islands and Alaska, in fact, Soviet jets on the Komandorskie bases today are within a few minutes flying time of Adak, headquarters of the American Aleutian sector command. The Russians are working hard on the Komandorskie base. Pilots report it has one of the largest airfields they have ever seen. And they are in general agreement that the Russians are there so Soviet jet fighters can intercept U. S. bombers if the President ever gives the signal to start dropping atom bombs.

The shortest distance Moscow, Leningrad and the industrial targets behind the Soviet Urals and in Siberia is via Alaska.

During the prelude to World War II it was decided that Europe was the number one target for U. S. fighting men. We poured it on in Europe while neglecting the Chinese, and consequently the Communists took over.

The same talk is coming from the State Department today regarding the importance of Europe over Asia. Secretary of State Dean Acheson keeps reminding us that the Russians are probably only fooling in Korea, that they are really getting ready to strike in Europe.

A lot of Americans, including a large segment of the military, are beginning to wonder if we haven't left the back door to our security open long enough.

I recall that the late Jan Smuts of South Africa took a long look at what was going on in the world just before he died.

"What is happening in Europe is small potatoes compared to what is going on in the Far East," was his opinion.

Freedom's Objectives

department strongly limited in its authority, plus a legislative department directly answerable to the people and holding exclusive power of writing laws and levying taxes, plus a strong and non-political judiciary freely available to uphold the statutes and the constitution against all usurpation.

To make such a fundamental program of liberty function and endure, certain further factors are essential. One of these is the power of the people to receive full and accurate information on what their government is doing. No intelligent judgment by the supreme authority of a republic, which is the people, is possible in the absence of such information. No more serious blemish in our national administration exists today than the fact that it has lied repeatedly with impunity, suppressed and distorted information again and again, and has dealt elaborately with propaganda in the place of facts. Free government can never be restored until this situation is remedied. The remedy, it may be, quite possibly will call for severe punishment of those who have betrayed the public's trust by utterance of falsehoods in high places.

For the re-establishment of freedom in America, it will be necessary not only to restore the forms of free government, but also to re-define the purpose and scope of government. We must recognize anew the facts as set forth in our Declaration of Independence, that government properly exists only as the servant and tool of the citizens, not as either their master or their source of income. The first precept of free government is the age-old dogma, "the least government is the best government."

Two further factors must be listed. One of these has to do with the status of the individual. There can be no such thing as free government, and can be nothing other than dictatorship in the making, until each citizen has a right to his own life and to his own possessions and to his own search for happiness. The only proper limitation of those rights is the corresponding right of all other citizens to seek the same objectives. Whatever abridges these basic human rights, excepting only the protection of similar rights among their neighbors, is a violation of the fundamental concepts of freedom and free government.

The final factor which must be restored before we can again have freedom and free government is free economy. This is a broad and ramified subject, but one which can fortunately be summarized by a single point—return to the gold standard. No economy which is controlled and regimented can abide by the gold standard. For its restoration, we must not merely bring our earnings and taxes and public spending and national debts into balance, but we must liberate as well our industrial economy. This may be a task of many years duration. Yet it is imperative before we dare even hope for the restoration of freedom in America.

St. Francis School

EDDINGTON, Dec. 13—Some of the boys at St. Francis were rewarded for their good work by attending the Philadelphia City Championship football game at Franklin Field between North Catholic high school and Bok Vocational School, winners in the Catholic and Public Leagues, respectively.

On Sunday another group enjoyed seeing the Eagles bring the season to a close with a clash with the New York Giants, although the weather and the results were not so good for the home team.

Another event of a different character was the annual forty hours devotion at St. Francis, Dec. 8th.

the feast of the Immaculate Conception of Mary is also the inauguration of this yearly three-day observance at St. Francis. The practice is an old Christian one which has been observed in this country for about 100 years. It is a period of thanksgiving for God's gifts to man and of reparation for man's abuse of them. The boys took turns spending a half hour in the chapel with this intention in mind.

GOOD-TO-EAT SWEETS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

By Frances Vannoy
(Home Economics Extension Representative)

Dried fruits and nuts—so rich in food value—lend themselves to a variety of attractive holiday sweets. Sweets made with dried fruits and nuts have excellent keeping quality. They are better for children than the more concentrated sweets. These recipes will delight the whole family—and your guests—at Christmas time:

Persian Sweets

- 1/4 lb. pitted dates
- 1/4 lb. figs
- 1 cup nuts
- 1 cup raisins

Prepare fruit and nuts and run through food chopper, using fine knife. Blend thoroughly. If too dry add a few teaspoons of honey or fruit juice until mixture will hold a shape. Press in 8 by 8 inch pan and cut in squares; chill in a roll and slice; or roll in balls. Roll individual pieces in confectioners' or granulated sugar.

Candied Apricots

- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup water
- 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1 pound dried apricots

Boil sugar water and cream of tartar to 228 degrees F. Add apricots (not soaked) and cover pan. Allow to boil for exactly 12 minutes. Remove apricots from sirup and cool. Roll apricots in granulated sugar. Insert a blanched almond in center of each apricot. Two hundred and twenty-eight degrees F. is just below soft ball stage.

Other toothsome treats for the holidays are filled cookies. Use your favorite plain rolled sugar cookie recipe. Shape dough into a long roll about 2 to 2 1/2 inches in diameter. Chill. Cut in 1/4 inch slices. Put a small amount of filling on each slice, top with another slice, press edges together, and bake.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J. — (INS) — Theoretically, a light bulb could be designed which would burn continuously for a thousand years, engineers say. But it would be useless for lighting purposes since it would probably give less illumination than a firefly.

XMAS RUSH OFTEN LEADS TO DEATHS*Residents Are Urged To Take Time To Stay
Alive*CAUTIONS FORGOTTEN

Take time to stay alive in December!

That appeal was issued to Pennsylvania motorists and pedestrians today by T. Elmer Transeau, Director of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Highway Safety.

"In the holiday rush which characterizes this month, we may easily forget ordinary caution just at a time when extraordinary care is required," he warned.

"Merry-making festivities reach their climax during the final weeks of the year. Parties, Christmas vacations for students, special days off from work, hectic shopping expeditions and increased use of family cars add to the seasonal hazards of darkness, cold weather and slippery pavements."

The state official urged drivers to use common sense and good judgment by adjusting speed to road and weather conditions, lengthening distance between vehicles, using tire chains when advisable, signaling intention to turn, avoiding quick turns and sudden stops, slowing down well in advance of curves and intersections, and applying brakes easily and carefully.

"In hard-packed snow or ice, motorists must limit their speed to the point where they have a safe margin within which to maneuver to avoid colliding with another vehicle or striking a chance-taking pedestrian," Transeau warned.

"A big self-help to safety on snow or ice is the use of anti-skid chains on tires. Tests by the National Safety Council show that tire chains reduce braking distances on snow or ice 46 per cent for autos and about 65 per cent for trucks and other heavy vehicles."

It was further pointed out that

DR. W. H. SMITHNeuropath-Chiropractor

(Licensed Since 1922)

accident studies reveal the winter season's two greatest threats to traffic safety are inadequate traction and reduced visibility.

"Behind the wheel, we must give due allowance for the longer distance needed for stopping, and we must keep windshields clear and headlights working properly to guarantee visibility in bad weather and after dark," Transeau commented.

"When on foot, we must regard the curb line as the danger line, waiting until there is a full traffic before crossing streets. December is an extremely dangerous month for both motorists and pedestrians. One reason is the longer hours of darkness and another is the hazard of snow and ice. A person can't be too careful under these conditions."
